

FUR SWINDLERS
FLEECE GROCER
HERE OF $1,440

Samuel Leberman Turns Over
Money For 38 Pieces Of Chamois Worth $100

Police today reported no trace of two fur swindlers who cleaned up $1,440 here Friday in the sale of 38 pieces of chamois skin—represented as imported seal—to Samuel Leberman, East End grocer and tavern owner.

Stuebenville police, notified of the case, linked the pair to a similar confidence scheme which netted $660 in the down-river city several months ago.

A two-day "buildup" by the swindlers bore fruit yesterday when Mr. Leberman, accompanied by one of the men who introduced himself as "Mr. Stern," went to the First National bank and withdrew $1,440 which he turned over in return for the 38 pieces of fur. A local fur dealer estimated the value of the chamois skins at $100.

Passports, Wires Produced
According to the story the victim told Police Capt. Norman McFarland, who investigated, Stern first put in his appearance Thursday, stopping at the East End store for lunch.

He unfolded a sad tale of need for ready cash to return to Belgium so he might see his wife and child. Then, Mr. Leberman said, he introduced the fur "bargain."

The swindler left after producing passports and telegrams which seemed authentic to the East End man. Friday, he reappeared, this time with a suitcase bearing 40 skins.

After bickering for awhile, Stern suggested that Mr. Leberman call up a Midland dealer, who the swindler said wanted the furs but didn't have the ready cash, to assure his honesty.

The telephone conversation verified Stern's story and the accomplice soon put in his appearance at the East End establishment. To prepare the trap he drew forth $180 and took two of the furs, leaving them with Leberman while he went downtown. "I can sell them for $100 apiece," the "Midland dealer" explained.

Leberman told police that everything appeared to be on the level and he saw no reason for not taking advantage of the opportunity. So when Stern reluctantly offered the remaining 38 pieces for $1,440, Mr. Leberman called him downtown in his car and drew the money from the bank.

The men returned to the store and Stern left a few minutes later to meet his accomplice. Passersby said the pair sped away in a blue sedan bearing Pennsylvania license plates.

Leberman first became suspicious of the sale when friends looked at the skins and told they were virtually worthless. He then called the police, but the two hours intervening between the transaction and the discovery gave the confidence men time to make their escape.

Mr. Leberman described Stern as about five feet, six inches tall, wearing a dark coat and soft hat. His accomplice was "very stylish," the East End man said, being dressed in a light coat and dark hat. Both men were said to be between 35 and 40 years old.

MARION TALLEY ASKS
DAUGHTER'S CUSTODY

Court Suit Reveals Star Of Opera And Film As Mother

By The Associated Press.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Feb. 11.—A custody suit brought here by Marion Talley has disclosed the opera, film, and radio soprano as the mother of a three-year-old daughter.

In a suit seeking return of the child, Susan Eckstrom, Miss Talley charged that Adolph Eckstrom, her husband and former singing teacher, was a "man of immoral character" and "financially unable to give the child a suitable home."

The singer, called the "American nightingale" when she made her metropolitan debut in 1926 at the age of 17, said that she had not seen the child since December, 1935.

She said that Eckstrom, to whom she was secretly married on March 23, 1935, kept their daughter in a Manhattan penthouse and had neglected to give her a needed eye operation.

Attorneys said Miss Talley had kept secret the birth of the child because she thought it might hinder her career.

She retired to a Kansas farm in 1929 but soon announced she would make a comeback. She went on an extended diet to trim her plump figure to fit movie requirements. Her first marriage to Michael Rauchenstein, German pianist, in June, 1932, was annulled after six months.

Joan Blames Tone's
Social 'Demands' In Petition For Divorce

By The Associated Press.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Feb. 11.—Keeping her place as a screen star allowed Joan Crawford too little time to attend the social functions enjoyed by her actor-husband, Franchot Tone, she disclosed in a suit for divorce today.

The actress who shortly before the separation last July 20, ending a marriage of three years, signed a seven-year contract calling for nearly $2,000,000, said she told Tone when they were wed at Fort Lee, N. J., that her 13-year climb from night club entertainer had not been easy and that being a film star meant long hours of study, strict attention to health habits and plenty of hard work.

"Notwithstanding this agreement," the actress' petition declared, "for more than a year he has objected to her activities and has been unreasonable in demands for her time."

Often, she asserted, Tone insisted she attend social functions with him, "well knowing she had work to do or was fatigued, and when she would suggest postponing it to a better time, he would become sullen and angry and would refuse to speak to her for days at a time."

When Miss Crawford, with no theatrical background and little education, married the suave, polished Tone, fresh from a New York stage hit, "Success Story," trophies she won at dances were replaced on the mantle by etchings and oil paintings. She patronized the arts, studied grand opera and entertained his friends.

But, her friends said, she tried at the same time to maintain a schedule of arising at 6 a. m., for a bath and massage, working all day in the studio, coming home for a voice lesson, dinner, another bath and massage and finally settling down to two or three hours of script study.

Miss Crawford's first husband was Douglas Fairbanks Jr. The marriage ended in divorce. With Tone back on Broadway again, her name recently has been linked with that of film writer Charles Martin.

SENATORS CALL
IN 11 NOMINEES
FOR INTERVIEWS

'Accusations' Against 'One
Or Two' Bring Summons
To Stand Scrutiny

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—A senate commerce subcommittee called in 11 of President Roosevelt's appointees for a "get acquainted" meeting today after receiving accusations of an undisclosed nature against "one or two" of them.

Chairman Bailey (D) of North Carolina of the full commerce committee said "no challenge" to the qualifications of any of the men was intended by the summons, but that "one or two persons—not senators—made accusations against one or two of the nominees and the committee thought it best to get acquainted with them."

Agency Nominees
The 11 compose the civil aeronautics authority and the maritime labor board. Congress authorized the creation of both agencies last session, and the appointments made subsequently by the President have yet to be passed upon by the senate.

Bailey declined to say what charges had been made, or against whom.

The nominees called to the subcommittee meeting were:
Maritime labor board—Robert W. Bruere, chairman, Clyde E. Seaborn and Louis Bloch.

Civil aeronautics authority—Administrator Clinton M. Hester, Edward J. Noble, chairman, Harlie Branch, Robert H. Hinckley, G. Grant Mason Jr., and Oswald Ryan, and the two members of the authority's air safety board, Sumpter Smith and Thomas Hardin.

Presidential appointments have become a subject of major controversy in the senate in recent days, the chamber having rejected the appointment of a federal judge in Virginia by a vote of 72 to 9. Both of Virginia's Democratic senators opposed the appointment on the ground that Mr. Roosevelt made it as a political stroke against them.

Intense Feeling Indicated
Indicating the intensity of feeling aroused, one of the nine senators who voted with the administration said privately that several of his colleagues had reproached him for his action. He said some anti-administration Democrats were more bitter than Republicans toward the President, and added:

"Things are in such a state that it's impossible to tell what this congress may do."

The upsets suffered by the administration so far this session on appointments and such issues as relief have been made possible by loose coalitions of anti-administration Democrats and Republicans.

Results of the survey were contained in a three-member committee's report at a quarterly meeting of state hospital managers in the institution for feeble minded at nearby Orient.

The committee, named last summer to compare Ohio's hospital program with that of other states, expressed the belief that better facilities in state institutions would increase recoveries from mental diseases.

Ranking Ohio 39th nationally in per capita maintenance costs in caring for mental patients, the report said:

"If medical standards of the state were increased to a proper level of adequate salaries and satisfactory medical facilities, it will not only result in the type of medical care to which patients are entitled, but also result in larger percentages of recoveries and discharges and very substantial depletion in the patient situation."

Ohio Cost Lowest
Comparing the Ohio hospital at Dayton, described as an average state institution, with the Utica, N. Y., state hospital, the committee reported an annual per capita cost at Utica of $448.14, compared with $185.50 at Dayton. The average Ohio per capita cost was listed at $191.78, compared with a national average of $359.27.

The report was signed by Dr. J. P. Bateman, superintendent of the state division of mental diseases; Dr. E. A. Baber, superintendent of the Longview state hospital in Cincinnati; and Dr. O. C. Fordyce, head of the state hospital at Toledo.

Sherwood stressed the need for new institutional buildings and asserted that the state was losing "good young doctors" because they were not well enough paid.

STATE'S MENTAL INSTITUTIONS HIT

Survey Indicates Patients
Lack Medical Care

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 11.—Wellfare Director Charles Sherwood said today that he would ask the legislature for a small undetermined amount of money to guarantee proper care for Ohio's mental defectives.

A report of a survey of state hospitals submitted to a meeting of institutional managers yesterday was described by Sherwood as indicating that patients were not being given satisfactory care.

Will Employ Extra Aids
The director said he would seek enough money to employ 90 doctors, instead of the present 44, construct new buildings, and hire additional nurses.

"We have about 25,000 patients in our hospitals," Sherwood explained. "I want enough money to guarantee satisfactory care for all of them."

NEGRIN RENEWS
FIGHT FOR OWN
PLAN OF PEACE

Serious Breach Indicated In
Loyalist Leaders' Policy
On Future Of War

By The Associated Press.

PERPIGNAN, France, Feb. 11.—From the citadel of Madrid, the symbol of the Spanish government's resistance, Premier Juan Negrin led a new fight today for a "lasting peace."

A few hours after flying over conquered Catalonia in northeast Spain to the central zones yesterday, Dr. Negrin announced in Valencia that the civil war would go on until insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco accepted his terms of peace.

Secret peace negotiations prompted by France and Great Britain in a desire to halt bloodshed and prevent Franco's Italian legions from taking a firmer foothold in Spain were brought into the open by Negrin's statement.

Adamant On Terms
He announced frankly the government's terms, emphasizing its insistence against reprisals but reiterating also his demands for a plebiscite and guarantees of a free state.

Franco long has maintained that he would accept only unconditional surrender of the government.

French and British diplomats were expected to make new efforts to reconcile the two sides.

Reports reaching the border from Alicante said that a serious difference of opinion between Negrin and his Foreign Minister, Julio Alvarez Del Vayo, on the one hand, and military leaders on the other was becoming apparent although it was not clear whether it was over peace negotiations or the best means of continuing the war.

As a result, Negrin's and Alvarez Del Vayo's personal guards were said to have been increased.

Gen. Jose Miaja, supreme government military commander, was reported to have called a meeting of all ranking military commanders of the central zone for today.

The seat of the government, which has moved successively from Madrid, Valencia, Barcelona and Figueras during the two and a half years of strife, returned to its starting point at the besieged traditional capital.

Catalonia War Ended
An insurgent communique announced that the occupation of the northern frontier facing France was completed and the war in Catalonia ended.

In the central zone, about one fourth of Spain's territory with 8,000,000 of the nation's peacetime population of 24,000,000, the government faced an uphill struggle against the insurgents turning on Valencia unless peace is concluded soon. Neutral observers predicted peace in Spain within a few days.

Franco held his Italian troops far from the border and left mostly Navarrese as sentries on the French line. This was in keeping with his pledge to the French government.

The Minnesota is a supporter of the navy's proposal to spend $5,000,000 at Guam—less than 1,500 miles from Tokyo—to improve facilities for handling planes. Critics of this project have denounced it as a step toward establishment of a major naval base likely to provoke international friction. Navy spokesmen have assured congress no such base was contemplated, saying the proposed harbor dredging was essential to commercial trans-Pacific aviation.

Maas told the house naval committee recently he had information that Germany was placing a protected air base on one of the Caroline islands, which formerly belonged to Germany but were mandated to Japan after the world war. Maas told reporters he had been advised a bomb-proof roof was being constructed over a narrow harbor.

He made his statement about the reported flight of Japanese and German planes over Guam after reading published reports from Tokyo that Japanese naval spokesmen had denied Germany was establishing a fortified air base in the Caroline islands.

Asserting Japan had refused to let foreigners visit the mandated islands, Maas declared this indicated there was something to conceal. "What else could that be but fortifications?" he asked.

TOKYO, Feb. 11.—The landing of Japanese troops on Hainan, an island off the South China coast that has been considered within the French sphere of influence, was greeted enthusiastically by the Japanese press and public today, the 2599th anniversary of the founding of the empire.

In Paris the French foreign ministry was reported reliably to be drafting a formal demand that Japan explain her military occupation of Hainan.

The French note, sources close to the ministry said, was being prepared in close consultation with Great Britain.

Thousands Join In Homage
To Pope And Speculate On
Selection Of His Successor

Venice Cardinal Heads List
Of 9 Italians Considered
As Prominent Prospects
To Become Holy Father

By The Associated Press.

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 11.—The names of nine cardinals came to the forefront today in speculation as to who would be the next Pope.

Heading the list of possibilities in the opinion of many familiar with church affairs was Alessandro Cardinal Piazza, beloved patriarch of Venice, a vigorous administrator and accomplished student.

Youngest Of Candidates
He is 54 years old, the youngest of any on the list of prominent prospects. Politically, he is regarded as in the center.

Others listed in the order in which many persons placed their chances of becoming Pope were: Alfred Ildefonso Cardinal Schuster, archbishop of Milan, 58.

Giovanni Battista Cardinal Naselli-Rocco Di Cornigliano, archbishop of Bologna, 66.

Maurilio Cardinal Fossati, archbishop of Turin, 62.

Alessio Cardinal Ascalesi, archbishop of Naples, 66.

Alla Cardinal Dall'Osta, archbishop of Florence, 66.

Luigi Cardinal Lavitrano, archbishop of Palermo, 64.

Pietro Cardinal Boetto, archbishop of Genoa, 67.

Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, vatican secretary of state, 62.

There was speculation, too, on the possibility of some one of those least expected to be chosen being elevated to the papacy, for that has happened many times.

Rumors ran through Rome that foreign cardinals had decided to unite behind Roderigo Cardinal Villeneuve of Quebec and were trying to win some Italians over. Sources familiar with the Vatican, however, placed little credence in such reports.

Unless precedents are broken by the college of cardinals—the one chosen will be an Italian and an archbishop of one of the larger Italian dioceses who has had administrative experience. That is why the nib—with the exception of Cardinal Pacelli—seemed to be the favorites.

Pacelli Last On List
Cardinal Pacelli, although probably the most prominent member of the college, is considered to have less chance than the others at the outset of the balloting, for the cardinal Camerlengo—Chamberlain of the Holy Roman Church—is rarely chosen Pope in these days.

In the event of a deadlock, however, it was believed the college might turn to him.

Any Roman Catholic, layman, priest—even a married man—could be elected Pope so far as church law is concerned. But there is not much chance of it nowadays.

STEAM POWERED FERRY TO LEAVE SERVICE ON OHIO

New Era, One Of Few Left On River, To Suspend Run After Steady Losses

The relentless march of the machine age has crowded out one of the few remaining steam-powered ferries on the Ohio river between Pittsburgh and Cincinnati, a ferry named—ironically—the New Era.

Secretary J. F. Thompson of the company whose boat churns its route between Wellsburg and Brilliant, O., announced stockholders would be asked this month to authorize suspension of the 148-year-old line because operations no longer are profitable.

Good roads have made it possible for travelers to "go around us" to bridges, said Mr. Thompson, explaining that the line had operated at a loss for three years. He predicted stockholders would approve suspension.

SENATOR WARNS OF WAR DANGER

LaFollette Sees Peril In U.S. Foreign Policy Trends

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Sen. LaFollette (Prog.) of Wisconsin urged congress today to reassert its right to a voice in the shaping of foreign policy.

The legislature could thus prevent the country from following a course in "deadly parallel" with that which led it into war in 1917, he declared in an interview.

The Wisconsin senator, a member of the senate foreign relations committee and a supporter of many administration measures, said he thought that if the United States supplied war materials to any one group of nations it would be placed in an unneutral position almost certain to involve it in any future foreign conflict.

He expressed the opinion that congress could prevent this by discussing foreign policies thoroughly in a way that would inform the American people about every move made.

Commenting on conflicting versions of the foreign policy which President Roosevelt outlined recently to members of the senate military committee, LaFollette criticized the administration for "shrouding in secrecy" arrangements for the French purchases of the latest type of military planes in this country.

The military committee will vote Monday on a motion by Sen. Clark (D) of Missouri to make public the record of its investigation of this purchase, which brought about the White House meeting between committee members and the President.

Some senators came away from this meeting with the idea that President Roosevelt was committed to the course of aiding the European democracies now arming against the totalitarian powers. The President told newsmen later it was not his policy to involve this country in any entangling alliances.

"I'm opposed to our becoming involved either in the situation in Europe or in the far east," LaFollette declared. "The fact that the administration intervened to shroud in secrecy the purchase of planes by the French has led to very unfortunate implications both at home and abroad."

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 11.—Use of sand instead of soil in growing greenhouse plants has proved extremely successful in experiments conducted at Connecticut agricultural experiment station, especially in reducing cost and saving labor.

Dr. A. A. Dunlap, who conducted the experiments, demonstrated that more and better seedlings were obtained by the sand culture method. Gabriel Nuttle, who assisted Dr. Dunlap, enumerated several advantages of this culture over the soil method.

Sand is cheaper, he said, and may be used over a period of several years, while soil, in most cases, must be renewed every two or three years in the greenhouse.

Sand can be washed to insure sterilization, while soil usually carries certain diseases which attack seedlings and larger plants. Weeds, he added, do not thrive in sand but beds of soil need weeding.

There is a drawback to sand, however.

Sand lacks nutrients required for plant growth. These essential "vitamins" must be added with the water. In an experiment with chrysanthemums, a pipe method was used whereby every week or 10 days water and a nutrient was allowed to flow through the pipe's stopcocks.

The chrysanthemums flowered successfully and were said to be better than those grown in soil at the same time.

BIBLE STUDENTS EARN AND LEARN

Cleveland Girls Work While Preparing For Careers

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 11.—Girls of the Cleveland Bible College are doing domestic housework to prepare themselves for careers as missionaries among wild natives of Africa and in remote sections of China.

Perhaps dusting furniture and manipulating an electric shaver in a fashionable suburban Shaker Heights home seems to be far removed from teaching the gospel in a mud hut, but it is part of the college's "co-operative plan."

The domestic duties performed by the young college girls to start them on the road to mission fields in India, Japan, Africa and China make the school one of the most unusual religious educational institutions on the continent.

Work and Theology Linked

The "co-operative plan" calls for welding of theology and housework to train preachers, missionaries, evangelists, Sunday school teachers and choir leaders. More than 155 students—girls and boys of 21 denominations—are enrolled from 12 different states.

Nearly 40 percent of them are Friends, coming from Quaker communities in Ohio, Indiana, Colorado, North Carolina, Virginia, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania and Michigan.

The Bible college is a Quaker institution. It was founded at its present site in 1892 by J. Walter Malone and his wife, Emma. Incorporated in 1899 as the Friends' Bible Institute and Training School, its first aim was to provide a study of the Bible. Later, it expanded into a training place for Christian workers. It now is the second oldest Bible college in the nation. Its president is Rev. Worthy A. Spring.

Housewives Seek Students

The educator said that the co-operative plan gives employment to many students as domestic servants and helps them pay tuition and other expenses. Many housewives rely on the college when seeking household help.

When a girl is employed, she lives at her employer's home and goes to school from 8 a. m. until 1 p. m., when she returns to her household duties. Her employer pays her a salary and she, in turn, uses the money to finance her education. The average wage, according to Rev. Spring, is $5 a week.

The college's young men do not participate in the employment plan, but many of them find work in department stores and hotels through their "Odd Jobs Club."

Letter Wins Dog

Child's Note Brings Award Of Sealyham Puppy As Gift Of Janet Gaylor

By The United Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 11.—A blue eyed girl has finished making a home for her new pet, Laddy of Alyesburg, a Sealyham puppy sent to New Orleans by Janet Gaylor of picture fame.

Five-year-old Maryem Folkes was given Laddy by a judging group of three men when she scrawled a letter to them explaining what a good home she could give the dog.

The letter follows:

"Dear Laddy of Alyesburg: My daddy says you are looking for a playmate. So am I. He says you are looking for a home. There is room enough for both of us at my house so why don't you come and live with me. I have a lot of dolls and a Donald Duck but dolls can't jump and play and Donald Duck is just make of cloth and I have to squash his stomach to make him say quack. I think you will like our house. It is nice and sunny and we have a backyard to play and no bad boys can tie cans on your tail and best of all there is another puppy that looks like you on the other side of the fence for you to play with when if you get tired of me.

Your little friend, Maryem Folkes.

When the dog arrived, Maryem was so busy cleaning out her doll house to make a home for her new friend that she had to cancel her 7:30 meeting with her next door friend.

Mrs. Solomon Says

SWEET dreams, my daughter! For the day of Saint Valentine approacheth, when a lover maketh his show down in verse and flowers and burnt offerings.

Yet, judge not a man by the costliness of his gift; for if he remembereth thee upon Saint Valentine's day, it is a good sign. But if he faileth to remember thee, peradventure, he loveth only himself—or some other damsel.

Go to. The prophets have declared that the ways of lovers of 1939 are not the ways of Romeo and Valentine; for their imaginations have gone dead and romance is not in them; and the hearts of the maidens are desolate.

But, I say unto thee, be of good cheer. For not all men are perennial bachelors and utterly lost to sentiment. Nay, peradventure, some of them are afflicted with the "love panic," whereof the symptoms are a giddy head and cold feet, from which a man suffereth when he

MAYOR SAYS ALL PINBALLS TO GO

Police Will Remove Devices Here By Monday Night

Mayor Lee Copenhaver said today that police would clean out all pinball machines and other gambling devices here by Monday night regardless of whether reward labels were removed and cash payments stopped.

Mayor Copenhaver pointed out the boards are illegal under city ordinance and "can't be legal one day and illegal the next." He said the operators must prove honest intentions and declared the action will serve as a test case if necessary.

Police were marking time after this latest warning to operators that the machines must go.

City Solicitor Carroll P. Lynch pointed out earlier in the week that the boards are not gambling devices in and of themselves and, to convict anyone for their use, police would have to witness or participate in an actual payoff.

Mr. Lynch explained that the discontinuance of rewards would make the machines just another game of amusement and not gambling devices or skill games.

He warned, however, that gambling among players is illegal and would provide grounds for arrest of the operator.

The solicitor said that all penny cigarette gambling devices must go, they definitely being illegal.

COAST GUARD RESCUES 37 OFF WRECKED SHIP

By The Associated Press.

BLOCK ISLAND, R. I., Feb. 11.—Overcoming pounding seas and dense fog, coast guards today completed rescue of 37 men of the grounded Texaco tanker Lighthouse after the 416-ton vessel was abandoned leaking badly and in danger of breaking up.

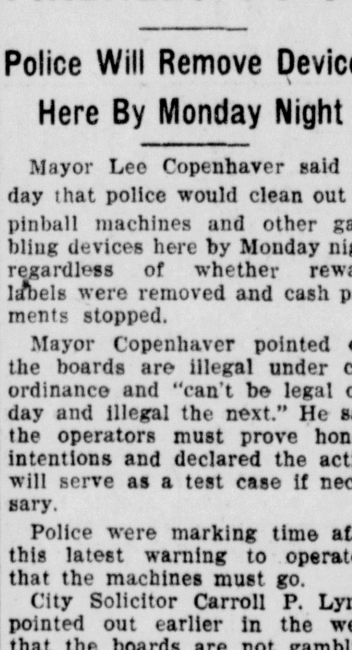

The tanker's commander, Captain Wolman, and 19 other men were taken on board the coast guard cutter Campbell four hours and a half after 17 others left the vessel and were taken to Block Island coast guard station.

The 6,429-ton Lighthouse, due in Providence today with 72,000 barrels of gasoline and kerosene from Port Arthur, Tex., piled upon this island's rocky shore last night.

Sixteen minutes later an SOS picked up by Radiomarine at Chatham, Mass., turned half a dozen vessels toward her, among them the steamer Thomas Tracy and the coast guard patrol boat Active, from New London, Conn. Nearly two hours elapsed before the Tracy churned its way to the scene, the first rescue craft to arrive.

NEW MEASURES TO BE PROPOSED BY STEPHENSON

2 School Bills And Health Board Plan Authored By District Legislator

Three bills, two dealing with public school matters and one with health board powers in cities with less than 50,000 population, will be introduced in the state legislature at Columbus Monday by State Representative John P. Stephenson of East Liverpool.

The three proposed measures will be referred to the reference committee of the house, later to be assigned to standing committees. The school proposals, one of which provides a new building financing proposal and the other permitting reorganization of rural schools, will be referred to the educational committee. The health board proposal probably will be assigned to the health committee.

Would Permit School Tax
The proposed school financing bill permits boards of education to ask approval of the electors of a one-mill levy outside the 10-mill limitation for five years for the purpose of constructing new school buildings. The levy could not be used for improving buildings or additions to old schools or for any other purpose except new schools.

It provides that when school boards establishing such a levy decide to erect a new school, the amount of bonds to be issued shall not exceed twice the amount of money which has been raised by means of the levy.

Taking the East Liverpool school district as an example, Mr. Stephenson explained that a one-mill levy here would bring in about $22,000 a year or about $110,000 in five years.

$375,000 Could Be Raised
Interest on this money probably would increase this figure to $125,000 in five years. Then the board with approval of the voters, would be permitted to issue bonds not to exceed $250,000, which, together with the money already available, would provide $375,000 for a new building.

Such a plan, the state lawmaker pointed out, would permit school boards to build up reserve funds for new schools and eliminate interest charges on new building costs. He pointed out that the Central school in Fourth st. had been erected in 1894 and not paid for until 1937. Interest on bonds issued for this school amounted to $113 for every dollar spent in construction.

The other proposed educational bill amends Section 4736 and 7730 of the General Code, and gives rural boards of education authority to close one-room schools with an attendance of less than 15 pupils.

School Closing Proposal
Under the present law, schools with an enrollment of at least 10 students may be retained. It also requires school boards to reopen closed one-room schools upon application of the parents of 12 children. By the amended bill as presented by Mr. Stephenson, applications of parents of 25 children would be required to force the re-opening of a closed school. When a school is closed, the board of education is required to furnish transportation to all children living more than two miles from the school to which they have been assigned.

The health measure permits boards of health in cities of less than 50,000 to submit annual budgets to the county budget commission, which would fix a tax rate sufficiently large to assure the amount requested.

County Would Appropriate
Under the present law, health boards submit their budgets to the city council, which bases its appropriation according to the amounts received through taxation. Under the proposed amended bill, the budget of the board of health would be submitted to the council, which in turn would file it with the county commission.

A health measure similar to that introduced by Mr. Stephenson was submitted to the state legislature three years ago when W. H. Phillips of Lisbon was the state representative from Columbiana county. The measure failed to be reported out of the committee to which it had been referred.

Mr. Stephenson is spending the week-end with his family in Thompson ave. He planned to return to Columbus Monday morning.

State Leads In School Movies

By The United Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 11.—Ohio schools lead the world in the use of motion pictures as an aid to education as the result of the vision of a young school teacher in the Philippine Islands 30 years ago.

That young school teacher was B. A. Aughinbaugh who today is state supervisor of visual education. While teaching in the Philippines from 1908 to 1911 he noted that though the natives had to have gospels printed in the curious dialects of the islands they all understood the story of Christ shown on the screen. He concluded that moving pictures are a universal language which could be used to revolutionize education.

Several years later as superintendent of schools in Mingo, Champaign county, Ohio, he had opportunity to develop his idea. He used second-hand movie equipment and a phonograph for musical accompaniment.

Articles were published on the project and other schools adopted it. In 1917, North Lewisburg, Lewisburg, Huntville Plumwood, and Mingo formed the Ohio School Motion Picture association.

As superintendent of schools in Lewistown, Aughinbaugh made several improvements in this form of education. Educators came to north-central Ohio to investigate this new movement in the schools. Aughinbaugh showed them that with a 12-minute picture he could prepare students for a test that ordinarily required 10 days of study in a geography book.

In 1926 Aughinbaugh's work was recognized by the state department of education and the department of visual education was formed with him as director. During the depth of the depression Aughinbaugh worked without a salary, the department appropriation having been eliminated.

During this time he gave lectures before civic organizations, using his vast collection of lantern slides of Ohio scenes. He contended that Ohio was losing $90,000,000 worth of business a year in traffic diverted through Kentucky, Michigan, and Canada, because Ohio lacked promotion.

Business men backed him and his appropriation was reestablished for a joint department with two purposes—disseminating promotional information on Ohio and providing a suitable collection of visual aids for loan to the educational institutions of Ohio.

Today the visual education owns more than $150,000 worth of movie film, much of it with sound accompaniment. It has 18 employees, and editing laboratory, inspection laboratory, and booking office. It has accounts with more than 3,000 teachers and ships an average of 500 reels a day, often more.

STATE REPORT SHOWS ONE FINDING OF $100

Lisbon Officials Praised In Report For Three Years

SPECIAL TO THE REVIEW. LISBON, Feb. 11.—Only one finding was returned by the state in a report covering this village's official activities from Aug. 8, 1935, to Aug. 22, 1938, received Friday by Mayor G. Cecil Rauch.

The finding was against the village on behalf of Kenneth Hiscow, town clerk, for $100. The examiner stated Hiscow had underpaid himself by this amount.

Receipts of the mayor's office during the period covered by the report totaled $6,718.26, of which $2,027.35 were in fines. Ordinance fines and costs aggregated $2,001.85; state case fines, $12.50; liquor act fines, $100; highway patrol fines, $103, and fish and game fines $10.

Balances in the various funds as of Aug. 22 included: General fund, $773.04; safety fund, $2,303.19; service fund, $4,706.56, and gas tax, $229.93. The average monthly bill for street lighting was $454.75 subtracted from the total.

ject to a 25 percent discount if paid within 10 days.

The village's bonded indebtedness in August, according to the report, was $70,900. Since that time the village has clipped $14,760 from the debt. In the past six years the bonded indebtedness has dropped from $131,600 to $43,200. All officials were commended for efficiency.

So Many Things To Do

IT IS good for mankind to be reminded, because sometimes it forgets, that the main stream of civilization is not controlled exclusively by unscrupulous wielders of temporal power.

The death of Pope Pius XI is such a reminder. "We still have so many things to do" were the Pope's last words as he lay on his death bed. "We," not they.

They can and on occasion have reviled the church and the things for which religionists strive. But in one way or another they have passed into oblivion while religion remained.

They have opposed the ideal and the practice of peace. They have encouraged men to kill one another over causes which subsequently were to become so indistinct no one could understand them.

They have turned away from tolerance and refused mercy. They have set up themselves as gods and commanded men to worship them. Throughout time they have been found in opposition to man's endless struggle to achieve a higher destiny than an animal trained to talk.

Temporal power can be used wisely, and frequently is—fortunately. It can be used to encourage men to strive for a higher destiny. Perhaps during the reign of Pope Pius it could have been used so that he, voicing the thought of all enlightened men aspiring to have a hand in the creation of a world at peace, would not have ended his life with the thought of leaving so many things undone.

It is that thought which, passed from one generation to another, has sustained men in their hope for a better world for all men. While civilization totters once more on the verge of crisis, it may shed needed light on the dilemma into which abuse of power has thrust it.

Drifting itself Out

CURRENT strategy in official discussion of foreign policy, following the flareup in Washington, calls for letting the issue drift itself out.

The theory is that when tempers cool off the whole thing will be easier to handle, which seems sound enough. In the meantime it is possible to weigh the issue calmly.

The main points of the issue are these:

1. While there is in actual fact no such thing as complete isolation, which would require popular neutrality, there can be such a thing as isolation from war based on official neutrality. It is this kind of isolation which most Americans have in mind when they view apprehensively the possibility of the United States becoming entangled in European affairs through secret understandings.
2. Even though most Americans lack sympathy for foreign governments which are totalitarian in nature and freely profess sympathy for the democratic states, they do not seem to feel it is proper for their government officially to manifest this popular feeling. They fear the possible consequences of a foreign policy determined by popular opinion.
3. The perennial struggle between the chief executive and the senate over the power of determination in matters of foreign policy has been intensified by the character of President Roosevelt. The President is at odds with many members of the senate, and has shown no disposition to play a moderate role either in foreign or domestic policy. The senate, as a whole, is unwilling to let Mr. Roosevelt have a free rein in determining this government's official attitude in foreign affairs.

A Humble Plea For Help

THE latest report on collections for the rebuilding of the Wellsville Baptist church, recently destroyed by fire, reveals that $94.56 of the needed $6,000 has been donated.

Both Wellsville and East Liverpool always have been generous enough to put over drives for the Young Men's Christian association, the Red Cross or Health Seals, in which aid is elicited by the most prominent citizens of both cities.

In one case the people with whom one would like best to be associated ask a possible donor to join them in becoming part of a civic movement; in the other a humble suppliant knocks on his door to ask for a few dollars.

This brings up the question of what real charity is, a question which only the individual can answer for himself. He will not get a button, a badge or his name on the honor roll for giving aid to the Wellsville Baptists; all he will have to show for his gift is nameless gratitude.

Significantly enough, two Wellsville ministers of comparatively wealthy congregations have seen the worth and importance of this drive and are backing it. The need for the church is apparent and its worthiness is unquestionable. Humble people have suffered a grave loss and are appealing to their fellow citizens for help.

Revenge

ACCORDING to the law of the pendulum, which govern women's style, the hair-do shortly will return from its upward sweep and go cascading down the back.

Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart, one of the fashion pace setters, already has had her picture taken looking like an old fashioned schoolgirl. Others will follow, probably.

But they can't follow immediately, of course—at least not in great numbers. Most of them are in the embarrassing position of not having the wherewithal.

They had it bobbed. It was too much trouble to take care of the stuff, they complained, whereupon the beauty parlors started to do a landoffice business taking care of what they had left. Bobbed hair, they asserted, was a sign of emancipation.

Today And Tomorrow

Roosevelt Undecided Whether To Be Statesman Or Politician And Party Suffers As The Result

By WALTER LIPPMANN

THAT the President's position has become very difficult is so evident to all experienced observers in Washington that not even his friendliest supporters deny it. He is at a point where he stands a better than even chance of wrecking himself, his party, and his whole program, both domestic and foreign. For this he is himself responsible, though it is the country, and very possibly the world, which may have to suffer the consequences. Mr. Roosevelt is following a course of personal conduct which, if carried any further, will almost certainly paralyze the operation of the government and illustrate once more the weakness of democracy.

The root of the trouble is that Mr. Roosevelt is unable to make up his mind whether he means to be a national statesman or a factional politician. He is trying to be both. It cannot be done. And in the end he will forfeit his national leadership and he will be defeated in his factional enterprises.

During the past 30 days, that is, since the convening of congress, he has laid out a program of national defense and a foreign policy designed to prevent war which can be carried out only if he has the broadest kind of national support. He has followed it up at once by a series of specific actions in domestic politics which have divided his party, have divided him from congress, and have brought him to a position, so far as his political influence is concerned, which begins to look extraordinarily like that of Wilson at the end of his administration, and of Hoover at the end of his.

But whereas Wilson had to struggle with the aftermath of a World war and Hoover with the effects of a world-wide depression the President has provoked his own difficulties and almost daily he aggravates them.

The beginning of his present troubles was the ill-fated decision of last summer to purge the Democratic party of the senators who had shown some independence, particularly in regard to the Supreme Court. The purge failed completely. The voters would have none of it. But Mr. Roosevelt has refused to accept the result and abide by it. One of his very first acts after congress met was to appoint to his cabinet Mr. Harry Hopkins, the man who, as former head of the WPA, represents to every one of his senators who were to be purged the power which threatened them with political destruction.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S next move was to insist stubbornly and uncooperatively on a deficiency appropriation for WPA which in the eyes of congress and of a large part of his own party, symbolized the President's determination to accept no important reform in the system of relief. His next move was to challenge one of the most respected figures in American public life, Sen. Carter Glass of Virginia, on a judicial appointment. Had the President had his way in this, it would have been regarded as meaning that the political position of Sen. Glass in the state of Virginia was to be attacked by the use of Presidential patronage.

The personal merits of Mr. Hopkins, the complicated question of

Their Last War?

By PRESTON GROVER

THE question of "isolation vs. aiding the democracies" turns a spotlight on a pair of elder statesmen in the senate who have been in the forefront of every battle on such a question since the World war.

They are Borah of Idaho and Johnson of California.

The Borah-Johnson isolationists have been trying to sound out the administration to learn whether any kind of commitment has been made or implied that would compel the United States, in order to save its face, to aid France and England in event of war.

Publicly they have been told that no such commitments exist and that the agreement by which France and England are able to buy planes here is simply a commercial transaction. From behind closed doors of the White House and the senate military affairs committee have come intimations that more was intended.

"Do you not think the American people, with their experience of the past 20 years, should be informed," asked Sen. Johnson, "if their rulers are going to take them even to the brink of war?"

The Californian, whose bronze face is set out like a cameo under his parted crop of white hair, was bristling with indignation.

Not since the post-World war days when he swung a stout club at the League of Nations had he appeared quite so stirred, although he stirs easily on matters of foreign affairs.

BORAH was seriously ill in a hospital at the time of the outbreak on the senate floor, but we had talked to him only a few days before and his own ire was up no less than Johnson's.

Both are in their early seventies and have suffered serious illnesses in recent years, but they could not keep out of a foreign affairs battle if it were certain to mean the end of them.

Suspicious Capitol Hill

And Open Declaration Of Assistance To Britain, France Didn't Help

SMOLDERING suspicion in the minds of certain congressional groups about America's foreign policy aims found new fuel in the President's purported statement to the senate military affairs committee that this government is deliberately helping France and England in their efforts to match the strength of the totalitarian states.

The outright suspicion on Capitol Hill that the U. S. has an unwritten alliance with England and France and that the armament program of the past two years is part of the network has been reported before.

The developments with regard to airplane orders by France and England have not allayed such suspicion.

The President himself made no public pronouncement of any plan to put the airplane factories of the United States at the disposal of France and England as a deliberate policy of matching strength of the democracies against that of the totalitarian states. But the committee conferees allowed enough to leak out to convince reporters that such were his plans.

THE President did say at two recent press conferences that he was glad to have France and England buy planes in the United States for two reasons. First, it put idle mechanics to work. Second, it helped U. S. plants to perfect the technique of mass production. But when he was asked whether he would welcome the same use of American plants to build German and Italian planes he declined to answer.

Much of the suspicion of his foreign policy arises from the trans-Mississippi states, the Dakotas and their neighbors, where anything smacking of participation in European affairs long has been distrusted. Several mid-western votes were cast against U. S. entry into the World war. Sen. Norris of Nebraska cast one, the only surviving senator who did so. Trans-Mississippi's lack of enthusiasm for the World war was of sufficient concern to the wartime administration that special pep-talkers were sent out to the Dakota country and adjacent states.

Their American loyalty was not questioned then and it is not now. But many of these trans-Mississippians suspect Wilsonian enthusiasm for international share-and-share-alike in world peace problems is almost, if not altogether, equalled by President Roosevelt's policy of international moral

THE green leaves can laugh at man's puny efforts at speed.

They have a "reflex" which apparently is as quick as the speed of light. The instantaneous nature of this reflex was discovered at Stanford university by Professor Lawrence R. Blinks and his research assistant, Royce K. Skow.

The reflex, long known, is a gush of oxygen from a leaf when light falls upon it. Biologists knew this reflex was fast because it was quicker than measuring instruments.

The Stanford biologists devised an electrical method of measuring the speed. They pressed the leaf against an electrode, of platinum or mercury, maintained at a negative potential of half a volt. When light flashed on the leaf, its oxygen, in chemical changes at the electrode, produced an electric current.

The flow of current was instantaneous, proving that the reflex is also instantaneous.

This leaf meter showed that a leaf kept in darkness for 10 minutes and then illuminated rapidly gives off oxygen for a few seconds. Then the oxygen output falls sharply for half a minute, but after that it picks up again and continues during the light.

The leaf acts as if it suddenly had an oxygen sigh, then rested, and finally got to work.

Employers Demand Best In Servants Yet They Work Them Long Hours, Pay Them Little For Exacting Duties

By DAMON RUNYON

A SAN FRANCISCO lady misconstrues a recent remark in this column about underpaid and overworked domestic servants.

In a letter she says we said, "They (the servants) should be accepted into the family circle, eat their meals with them, etc." In other words, be one of the family.

We didn't say exactly that. What we said was in effect that the responsibilities and more or less intimate service required of household servants should give them the status of ex officio members of the family. We meant they should have the same friendly consideration and protection that the head of a household would give to one of his children.

We did not say and certainly did not mean that servants should be required to associate on social terms with the family or eat their meals with it. That, in many instances, would be too tough on the servants. We have seen families whose table manners would be more than the servants could stand.

The San Francisco lady says our remarks on the servant problem are in bad taste, to say nothing of the ideas they may put in some domestic heads, to which we reply we are surprised to hear that suggestion coming out of San Francisco. It is typical of the New York servant employer.

THE theory in many quarters that you must not put ideas in heads, domestic or otherwise, is one of the things that has always been wrong with this world. We judge from letters we have received from all over the United States, however, that our ideas had been implanted in the heads of household workers long before we brought them out in print.

This servant problem is bigger than we suspected—for servants. It is our belief that as a class they are the least considered and the least protected of all persons who work for a living. It might be argued that under a different social system, servants would not be utterly indispensable, but we are talking about the system as it exists, and as it has always existed.

There are in this country hundreds of thousands of men and women engaged in household work of one kind and another. It is an honorable occupation. We contend that in view of the perfection required of it, and of the honesty and faithfulness it demands, that it is skilled labor. It should be raised to the dignity of any other form of skilled labor. It could be if employers were a little more humane and Christian in their attitude toward servants.

WE insist no one is entitled to household service unless they can afford to pay a living wage for that service. We say it reflects no credit on an employer who takes advantage of the necessity of an honest man or woman by paying them skintail wages.

Some of the ladies who employ servants argue that in addition to the wages they pay, they also provide food and living quarters for their employees. They illogically figure that is so much velvet for the employee. Well, the amount of food consumed by the servants probably makes little, if any, difference in the family budget, and some of the living quarters provided would be a scandal to cats, as a matter of fact, many a household worker would prefer getting more salary and providing his own food and living quarters.

However, it is not that which counts so much with the average household worker. It is the lack of consideration—the inordinate labor required and the hours. There is no standardization of method in their work. Scrubbing, cooking, washing, ironing, serving, taking care of children, answering doorbells and phone calls, running errands—it all goes into one pot, so to speak, with long shifts and no extra salary for overtime.

If you employ servants, you can readily figure out where you trust not only your comfort, but your property and your very life to them. You expect as much loyalty to you and your interests from a servant as from a brother or a sister. Sometimes you may get more. You expect the servant to be always on the job. You require as much intelligence of him or her as the case may be, as you do of an employee of supposedly higher social and financial rank.

You insist on moral and physical cleanliness, sobriety and cheerfulness. In other words, you expect a higher type of individual than you look for in almost any other field. If that sort of laborer, male or female, is not worthy of their hire, we would like to know who is.

A Letter To The Editor

Editor, The Review

Dear Sir:

A Pittsburgh paper entitled "No Circus for Jimmie." It was the story of the coming of a circus to an Iowa town where Jimmie lived. Jimmie never had seen a circus and, naturally enough, he wanted to go. But his parents were poor and there was no money for circuses. But Jimmie, so the story goes, "Conceived a very practical idea and not being a lazy lad, he put the idea into execution. He had heard that sometimes circus managers gave away a ticket or two for industrious lads who would carry water for the elephant—and carrying water for the elephant was in Jimmie's line.

"The job was well done and at the end of his toil the boy was given two tickets for the show. On his way home to tell his mother of his good fortune a motor truck ran over Jimmie and killed him.

"The show went on, but it wasn't a good show for hundreds. For tragedy had come into the village and the people knew it. . . . and the man who rode the elephant, made the great best lower his head in deference to a little boy whose dream of the glitter and glory of the circus was forever shattered. . . .

Somehow, the burning of the Baptist church at Wellsville a few weeks ago brought this story back to my mind. I remembered the feeling I had for Jimmie, who had worked and sacrificed to attain this one ambition of his life and just as he had the ambition nearly realized—in fact, held in his hand the very thing that would enable him to realize it—his life was cruelly snuffed out by a careless driver. Obviously there was nothing to be done for Jimmie. Sympathy was the only thing left and that wouldn't bring back his life.

But here is a situation, remotely similar, in which we can do something more than sympathize. The Baptist church was built by those who had nothing to spend for luxury, only the necessities of life, and that only after great sacrifice. And just as this ambition of having a church of their own was realized by toll and sacrifice, it too was recklessly burned out of their hands. But there is, in this case, something that we can do about it more than mere sympathy.

We can help them to rebuild that which they, due to no fault of their own, have lost. The words of the editorial are peculiarly appropriate here:

"There's something about the tragedies of everyday life that make us a little more akin to each other. We come a little closer in human sympathy."

The house-to-house solicitation for funds with which to rebuild the burned edifice has raised to date $94.56.

Very truly yours,

SUNDAY SERVICES IN EAST LIVERPOOL CHURCHES

CHESTER CHURCH LEADER TRAINING SCHOOL TO OPEN

50 Expected To Enroll For Second Series Courses In Teaching Christ

A six-week leadership training school under joint auspices of the Chester-Wellington Association and the West Virginia Council of Christian Education will be launched in the Chester Church of Christ Thursday at 7:30 p. m.

Rev. L. A. Britton pastor of the Church of Christ, will be registrar of the school, while Rev. George W. Kiehl, pastor of the Newell Presbyterian church, will be dean. About 50 Sunday school and church leaders are expected to enroll.

Classes Every Thursday

Classes will meet every Thursday night from 7:30 to 9:30. The meetings will be 50 minutes each while an assembly period will be 20 minutes long. The registration fee will be 50 cents a student, which, in some cases, is being paid by the churches which the student attends.

Four courses will be offered. All are standard second series courses in the curriculum of the International Council of Christian Education. Those who successfully complete the study will receive credit cards from the International Council.

Rev. L. O. Douds, pastor of the Chester Methodist Episcopal church, will be the instructor for the course "The New Testament: Its Content and Culture." The nature of the religious movement centering in Jesus Christ in Palestine in the first century, the general content of the New Testament and the values of the New Testament for the developing life of humanity are studied in this course. The text book will be "The Story of the New Testament" by Prof. E. J. Goodspeed of the University of Chicago, one of the modern translators of the New Testament.

Church History To Be Sought

A course in church history, "The Church Through the Centuries" will be taught by Rev. K. Glen Fleming, pastor of the Chester United Presbyterian church. It deals with the growth of the Christian church from the time of its early beginning. The book to be used is "Christianity," by E. Bevan.

"Guiding The Religious Growth of the Juniors" will be a course in teaching procedures, to be taught by Lew W. Hannen, principal of the Central school in Chester. This course deals with the ways in which a teacher or other leader may guide a child in developing a wholesome Christian personality. The text book is "Teaching Junior Boys and Girls," by M. M. Wakin.

Rev. Calvin T. Welmer, pastor of the Chester Presbyterian church, will be the instructor of the course, "Youth and Worship." This will be for both adult leaders of youth and young people. The text book will be "Training Young People in Worship," by E. L. Shaver and H. T. Stoen.

Bulletins giving complete information regarding the school are in the hands of the ministers of Chester, Newell and East Liverpool. Since no school is being conducted in East Liverpool this winter, church leaders from here have been invited. Books will be on sale at the opening session of the school. In order to be eligible for a credit, a student must attend at least 10 of the 12 sessions.

YOUNG FOLKS TO HOLD FORUM IN WELLSVILLE

A young people's forum in which the problems of youth will be the topic for discussion will be conducted in the Second Presbyterian church of Wellsville Sunday at 5:30 p. m. Lunch will be served in connection with the service.

Rev. E. C. Irwin, the pastor, will deliver the first in a series of sermons built around the notes of the diatonic scale at the 11 a. m. service. He will discuss the note "C" at the services Sunday. The subject for his talk to the juniors will be "Building a Harmonious Life" and for the adults, "Enter God."

The last in a series of sermons on "The Religion Jesus Lived" will be given at 7:30 p. m. "Religious Demands of Jesus—Simple Life" will be the topic for the concluding talk.

The young singing class will meet in the church Sunday at 4:15 p. m.

SALINEVILLE TO HEAR WINTERSVILLE PASTOR

Special To The Review.

SALINEVILLE, Feb. 11.—Rev. A. E. Kirby, pastor of the Wintersville Methodist Episcopal church and district Epworth League society president, will preach in the local Methodist Episcopal church Sunday at 7 p. m. His subject will be "What Young People Can Do in Christianizing Our World."

Miss Betty Kimberly will be the leader of the Epworth League society meet at 6 p. m. The topic will be "Pathways to Personality."

Four persons have been received in the preparatory membership class the last two Sundays. They are Martha Echols, Jacob Ehlensch, Ruby Anderson and Velma Ritchie.

Circle 7 will meet in the home of Mrs. V. B. Willis Tuesday night. Plans also are being made for an evangelistic campaign Monday, March 20.

CHURCH GROUP PLANS EVANGELISTIC RALLY

Newell Nazarene School To Give Program Sunday

A Sunday school rally will be conducted in the Newell Church of the Nazarene Sunday at 9:30 a. m. in connection with the revival campaign which has been in progress two weeks.

A first and second prize will be given two persons bringing in the most people to the Sunday school service. Transportation will be provided for those unable to walk.

The program follows: Song, school; special musical selection, octet; marimba selection, Carl Hanks; scripture lesson and prayer Rev. David Seavers; violin solo, "Calvary" Richard Thompson; special song, "The Way to Zion," special song, Curtis Brown, accompanied by Marjorie Furby; address of welcome, Rev. A. W. Smith, pastor; selection, octet, address, Carl Hanks; song, Curtis Brown, accompanied by Marjorie Furby, offering; marimba selection, Carl Hanks; song, octet; presentation of prizes, Roy Thompson, supt., and selection, octet.

Rev. Smith will preach on the subject, "Why Holiness?" Sunday morning and on "Is Christ Coming?" at the evening service.

Rev. Kindsvatter will deliver his final sermon in the Ford City church, where he has been pastor for three years, Sunday. His household furnishings will be brought to East Liverpool Wednesday. The parsonage, which adjoins the church on Jackson st., has been papered, refurnished and cleaned for the new minister.

150 COUNTY EPWORTH LEAGUERS TO RALLY

Rev. Heaston Will Speak At Meeting In East End

One hundred and fifty or more members of the Columbiana county Epworth League groups will meet Tuesday night at the Pennsylvania ave. Methodist Episcopal church.

Rev. Dwight Heaston, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, will be the principal speaker.

The program will be in charge of the league of the Pennsylvania ave. church. Following the program, refreshments will be served in the basement of the church, and games will be played.

Mrs. N. R. Somerville, wife of the pastor, has announced the completion of a Bible reading contest in which the contestants, a class of 30 girls, read 21,000 verses of scripture. The prize was awarded to the blue team, which read the most verses in the two months allotted. They were given a banquet by the white team.

The teams were formed from the Double W. Sunday school class, taught by Mrs. Somerville. Each had 15 members. Mary Agnes Wright captained the winning team.

Bulletins giving complete information regarding the school are in the hands of the ministers of Chester, Newell and East Liverpool. Since no school is being conducted in East Liverpool this winter, church leaders from here have been invited. Books will be on sale at the opening session of the school. In order to be eligible for a credit, a student must attend at least 10 of the 12 sessions.

FIRST PRESBYTERIANS MEET IN CLASSROOMS

Members of the First Presbyterian church will worship in the Sunday school room Sunday due to the closing of the main auditorium this week for repairs.

Decorators now are at work in the church. Walls are to be repainted, an improved lighting system installed and the floor carpeted. The work will require from six to eight weeks.

In the meantime Sunday and week-day services will be conducted in the smaller Sunday school quarters. Sunday school will be dismissed earlier than usual to permit a rearrangement of the chairs for the preaching service.

Rev. James Clark of Knoxville, former pastor of the Island Creek Presbyterian church, will preach Sunday at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Supply pastors will conduct services in the local church until Rev. M. Rudolph Miller assumes charge on Sunday, April 16.

SPEAKERS SCHEDULED IN PASTOR'S ABSENCE

In the absence of Rev. D. Park Chapman, the pastor, who is conducting a revival campaign in Warren, substitute speakers will conduct the Sunday services in the First Church of Christ tomorrow and also Sunday, Feb. 19.

Miss Marion Stanley, director of religious education in the local schools, will be the speaker at the 10:30 a. m. service tomorrow. Rev. Robert Thomas will preach Sunday night.

The morning service, Feb. 19 will be in charge of Miss Verla Ross of Mather, Pa. Mr. Thomas also will conduct the night service on that Sunday.

Rev. Chapman will return home Feb. 20.

SALVATION ARMY HERE TO MARK ANNIVERSARY

The 55th anniversary of the founding of the Salvation Army in East Liverpool will be celebrated by the local corps Friday, Saturday and Sunday of next week.

There will be a banquet Friday at 6 p. m. and special services also will be held Saturday and Sunday. A number of out-of-town speakers will assist in the celebration.

The local corps was organized here during the historic 1884 flood. The first meeting was held in the old brick building which stood on the site of a filling station at East Third st. and Broadway.

LUTHERANS PLAN INSTALLATION OF MINISTER FRIDAY

Rev. John Kindsvatter Will Greet Congregation After Services At St. John's

The Taylor-Skidmore quartet from the East Liverpool Church of the Nazarene will assist in the Sunday night service in the Wellsville Nazarene church, Rev. Clark Allison, the pastor, announced today. The quartet is composed of Misses Ruby Taylor, Louisa Taylor, Edith Skidmore and Eleanor Skidmore.

Evangelist Charles Clark will terminate a two-week revival campaign in the Wellsville Methodist Protestant church with Sunday morning and night services.

A class of young people will meet after school hours in the Clarkson Presbyterian church to study the Presbyterian catechism, Rev. R. M. Touvel will conduct the class and also mid-week services in the same church in the near future.

Miss Mary Jane Neiser will be guest musician Sunday at the Boyce Methodist Episcopal church. In the Lincoln Day league program at 6:30 p. m. she will give a number of marimba selections and also will give special music at the night service.

Rev. Fr. William J. Sauer, pastor of the Sacred Heart Catholic church of Chester, will lecture on "The Infallibility of the Pope" Sunday at 7:30 p. m. The lecture is especially for non-Catholics, but members of the faith also are invited.

A two-week revival campaign will be held in the Avondale st. Free Methodist church beginning Sunday night. Rev. C. O. Bailey, the pastor, will preach Sunday and Rev. William Grafton, pastor of the Free Methodist church at Rochester, Pa., will come here Monday to preach very night during the remainder of the campaign.

A special program celebrating national young people's Sunday will be featured in the First United Presbyterian church Sunday at 7:30 p. m. It will take the place of the regular Sunday night preaching service. The Girls' Reserves will attend the 11 a. m. service in body. Rev. Clyde H. Canfield, the pastor, will preach on the subject, "The Golden Era."

A Bible quiz is being featured in connection with the free and easy meeting in the Salvation Army city hall each Saturday night. A new testament is given each week to persons who give correct answers to the largest number of questions.

SCOUTS OF TROOP 38 WILL ATTEND SERVICE

Members of Troop 38, Boy Scouts of America, will celebrate Scout anniversary week by attending revival services in the First Methodist Protestant church Sunday at 11 a. m.

The Scouts will meet in their quarters in the Sunday school room at 10:30 a. m. They have been requested to appear in uniform if possible.

MISSION GROUPS TO HEAR DOCTOR

Hope Nicholson To Relate 15 Years' Work In India

Dr. Hope H. Nicholson, head of the Jackson Memorial hospital at Ballypur, India, who is spending a furlough in the United States, will occupy the pulpit of the Wesleyan Christian church Sunday at 7:30 p. m. in a service under the auspices of the Women's Missionary society.

Dr. Nicholson has been in India for 15 years as a representative of the Disciples of Christ, working through the United Christian Missionary society. She recently came to the United States after a nine-month study in Vienna.

Mrs. Walter E. Weldon will be chairman of the service, and members of the Missionary Guild and Young Matrons Missionary societies will serve as ushers. Members of all four mission groups in the church have been asked to attend.

Program Of Service

Opening hymn, "If Jesus Goes With Me;" scripture reading, Rev. E. McConkey; selection, "Now the Day is Over;" ladies sextet composed of Mrs. Lester Donnelly, Mrs. Frances Holcomb, Mrs. Charles Montgomery, Mrs. Ray L. Bolon, Miss Marie Holcomb and Miss Deanne Golden; prayer, Mr. Charles J. Robb; offering; announcements; vocal duet, "Why Should He Love Me So?" Miss Golden and Miss Headley; address, "Christ at Work in India," Dr. Nicholson; closing hymn, "Open My Eyes That I May See;" benediction, Mrs. C. F. Kennedy.

Since going to India in 1923, Dr. Nicholson has rendered conspicuous service in the case of medical missions. For one year she was in charge of the Damoh hospital and dispensary where she not only served the people of the community but was responsible for the medical care and treatment of boys in the Damoh boarding school.

Graduate Of Michigan

She assumed charge of the Jackson Memorial hospital and training school for nurses in 1925.

Dr. Nicholson was graduated from the state normal college at Ypsilanti, Mich., and from the University of Michigan with A. B. and M. D. degrees. She served her internship at Hackley hospital in New York city.

Singing Star Turns To Melodramatic Role

Gladys Swarthout, lovely singing star, turns to thrilling melodrama in "Ambush," a picture full of shooting, escapes and a daring robbery, which heads the Columbia theater double bill Sunday. The second feature will be "Call of the Yukon," an outdoor film adapted from a novel by James Oliver Curwood.

Taylor And Berry Star In Historical Film

Robert Taylor and Wallace Berry are the battling stars of "Stand Up and Fight," dashing story of Maryland in the '50's, which opens Sunday at the Ceramic theater. The film, which tells of the fight between stage coaches and early trains, includes Florence Rice, Barton MacLane and Helen Broderick in the cast.

New Shows

A stormy honeymoon on wheels that winds up in Reno and new-found romance, is threatened throughout "Next Time I Marry" opening at the State theater today, in which Lucille Ball, James Ellison and Lee Bowman have the leading roles.

Cast as newlyweds who have taken the sacred vows as purely a business proposition in order that the bride may be eligible for a huge inheritance, Miss Ball and Ellison embark for Reno in a trailer directly after the wedding ceremony. How their hectic battling ultimate develops into real romance before their planned divorce is consummated, lays the foundation for the hilarious climax.

The attempt of a conniving aunt and a trouble-making cousin to break the companionship between Bobby Breen and his father, Leo Carrillo, is the basis for the plot of "Fisherman's Wharf," second feature in which Bobby is starred.

Carrillo, a widower, with his adopted son, Bobby, earn their living fishing San Francisco Bay for crabs. They are of that small colony of colorful Italian fishermen who make their port at the famous Fisherman's Wharf. Into their happy lives comes Lee Patrick and her mean son, Tommy Bupp. Together these two combine to disrupt the great father-son palship, with a dramatic revelation at the end.

In addition to the above mentioned players, the film also features Slicker the famous trained seal, and the lovable Henry Armetta, both in comedy parts.

How To Keep Well—
Ills Of Lincoln's
Day Studied By
Today's Doctors

Abe Suffered From Chronic
Constipation, Leading To Fits Of Melancholia

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
ON the eve of Lincoln's birthday it is natural to try to project oneself back into the days of his life and the men and women of his time. For us, in this column, we must confine ourselves to his medical life, but we have enough of interest to give you a picture of certain aspects of his time.

There was no doctor at Lincoln's birth, the only attendant being a Mrs. Enlow. Warm water, warm coverings and a hot fire in the cabin were the only precautions used to safeguard this precious life in its early hours.

When Lincoln was nine years old, his mother, Nancy Hanks Lincoln, died—probably from using milk from cows which fed on white snakeroot. Today her life could have been saved by the proper administration of carbohydrates, but in those days nothing of the nature of the disease was known.

A Healthy Life
During most of his life Lincoln was physically healthy in spite of his lanky and somewhat unfavorable build. In 1833 he suffered a condition of mental depression. As is well known, he did not appear on the day first set for his marriage, which in the light of future events was not quite as queer as it appeared at the moment.

His attacks of melancholia, which persisted on and off for some time, have been ascribed to chronic constipation from which he suffered all his life, and which would be natural in a man of his physique. Costiveness probably also explains his fondness for apples.

Like all other human beings, of course, Lincoln had many minor ailments in the course of his life, and it is with a fellow feeling that we notice some of his drug store bills: In 1858 he bought 10 cents' worth of adhesive plaster; in 1859 he bought 25 cents' worth of castor oil, also 35 cents' worth of Brown's mixture and cough candy; in 1859 he bought a bottle of Dead Shot which was used as a sure cure for bedbugs.

After one of the Douglas debates he fell into an acute state of exhaustion and was treated at the Quincy House, Quincy, Ill. At that time the proprietor of the Quincy House was George P. Floyd and Mrs. Floyd was asked to attend the sick orator. She took one look at him and said that he needed a "rum sweat," at which Lincoln said he never drank a drop in his life.

External Use Only
But Mrs. Floyd assured him that the rum was for external use only. He was stripped and seated on a cane-bottomed chair and covered with blankets. Then a pan of New England rum was lighted and placed under the chair. This started a profuse perspiration, and broke up his malady.

Years later Mr. Floyd visited at the White House. Lincoln recognized him and said, "I believe your wife saved my life when I was in Quincy in 1858. Yes, I have taken that rum sweat that she prescribed for me many times and I have prescribed it for some of my friends. It has always been a dead shot."

MEMORY OF DETECTIVE
LONG ON FINGERPRINTS

SALINAS, Cal.—Deputy Sheriff Guy Abbott has a memory for fingerprints as keen as some policemen have for faces.

He dug through the files and in five minutes found the same prints in the files of unsolved burglary cases, and which had been found at the scene of a burglary.

The prisoner admitted they were his.

Sundown Stories

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

IT WAS plain to be seen that Miss Puddle Duck admired the way in which Mrs. Quacko had arrived.

And Mrs. Quacko, too, was pleased that her neighboring friend had come in such unusual style.

"I've only been here a little while," Miss Puddle Duck said. "I'm on my way to a pond some distance from here where there are a few more Puddle Ducks."

"And that reminds me," quacked Mrs. Quacko, as she accepted the fine seed salad. Mrs. Quacko handed her on a birch bark plate. "I come from Puddle Muddle. Did you ever have any relations around there?"

"I wondered if at some time or other any of your family were related to any of my family."

"To be sure we don't call ourselves Puddle Muddle ducks or Puddle Ducks as you do—but there may be some sort of connection."

"I think not," quacked Miss Puddle Duck. "Puddle Muddle is merely your home, I'm what is known as a member of the real Puddle Duck family."

"Your family is a domestic one—so is that of Mrs. Quacko. To be sure we're all distinctly connected. We're domestic in a way but not nearly so much so as you are."

"We're not wild ducks. Oh, no, we're merely their distant cousins, too. They can fly great distances. You hardly fly at all, and we fly very little. We're in between, you might say."

"We wouldn't want to be great travelers the way the wild ducks are and we wouldn't want to be as dull as you are."

"Dull!" quacked Mrs. Quacko, upsetting her salad. The little ducklings ate it greedily. They had been told to wait until after the company had gone but knew no one would notice what they did now.

"Dull! A duck who arrives riding a lamb, a duck who has penguin sharing her pond," quacked Mrs. Quacko. "By the way when must you be leaving?"

DANGEROUS SERVICE

The Characters
Peter Mallone: Adventurous journalist.
Petronella: His loyal young sister.

Yesterday: The Mallones go to Russia, and send their relatives back to England.

CHAPTER 22

Danzig

JAMES remembered another sentence from Petrel's letter. "I did not hear any more from Tony. I wish I could understand why fate so nearly let us meet again; but not quite."

On her arrival in Moscow, Petronella had found roses, a card and a few scribbled words. She had missed Lance by three days. He had been sent on some special mission to Persia. It was an extraordinary business, this love affair of Petrel's, thought James. He wished he could genuinely disbelieve its significance. He had to admit a resentful admiration for the fellow, holding her like that. What would come of it? Probably he wasn't really any use to her. Eventually she would realize the fact. The chain would be snapped. She had not really wanted to leave Ballfield. If he had tried, he believed he could easily have kept her here.

The train stopped. James saw them get out of a carriage near the end of the train. They were unmistakable. The man with his little pointed gray beard, haggard, wasted face, wearing Petrel's coat, which was too big for him. The quaint looking little girl with dark straight hair, Slav cheekbones, soft eyes, and an alabaster pallor.

James hurried forward. As he welcomed them and shook their thin hands, he felt a little overfed, clumsy, unversed in the realities of life. They had very little luggage. One suitcase, an old tin trunk, and a long parcel.

"That is my Balalaika—I will play for you as I did for Petrel and Peter!" the girl said.

"Hope you got here without difficulty?" inquired James.

"Already this country seems like Heaven. We have such fine meals!" Tamara Morovitch laughed, showing even teeth. She looked fourteen. She was twenty. "We feel very shabby, but very happy to be here. Petrel sends you his love and many, many messages."

"You left her well?"

"Yes, but she and Peter are so unwise. All the time he writes. And once they left Moscow with my brother, without leave, dressing as Russians. They speak Russian too well. I hope they will leave very soon, but Peter is never contented. He is interested in the big trial. My brother, also, is very foolish to stay in Russia, don't you think? But he had been listening to speeches. In Russia," she dropped her voice to a whisper. It seemed suddenly to occur to her that here no dire consequences would result. In Russia everybody is making speeches, and everybody is hungry!" she shouted gaily. Ernest Higgs, the porter, looked extremely surprised.

She continued in this strain, answering James' questions, chattering and exclaiming, as he drove them home to lunch. She spoke for, about, and instead of her father. With his little beard sunk into the collar of Peter's new overcoat, he remained silent.

Romantic Ideal
"I can't decide whether to go home, or not, Peter. Read these two letters—one from father; one from Tamara. They seem to be getting along. I'm half inclined to leave them to it," said Petrel.

Peter took the two letters. One was in Colonel Mallone's precise heavy writing. The other in Tamara's childish, spidery hand.

"Let me just finish this, then I'll consider the problem. Without reading the evidence at all, I should think you're probably right."

They were in his hotel room in Danzig. The table in the window at which he scribbled, and Petronella typed, was littered with the day's papers. He had been allowed to remain in Germany precisely twelve hours, before his undesirable ability was discovered, and the Police President ordered him to leave. Long enough, incidentally, to hear a thunderous speech from Hitler. Long enough to see thousands of un-German books publicly burnt before the Minister of Propaganda in Berlin. With his customary good luck, he had happened to arrive at a time when things were happening. With equal fortune, he had decided to move on here, a day or so before Rowdon would probably have ordered him to investigate the renowned "corridor," in any case.

Since their arrival on Thursday, occurrences in Danzig, as he was now engaged in telling the reader of the News, had come unpleasantly near an "incident." Not unnaturally, the Danzig trade unionists resented having their building broken into by Nazi storm troops, and a balliff, in distrust of a debt they owed to the German Federation.

They were enraged to see the Nazi flag raised insolently over it. They had retaliated promptly, remonstrating outside the League of Nations' office, exhorting him to do something to protect the Danzig Constitution.

Petronella was standing by the window. She spoke.

"Everything is quite now. There will be some broken heads I suppose, but nothing worse, no real fighting. Oh, Peter, these uneducated pig-headed boys in colored shirts!"

He looked up. "I think I know what you are going to say. I think I've just written it."

"Read it to me."

"This growing conflict between the creeds of Communism and Fascism will be bitterer than war between nations. It has the power to convert men of the same blood into fanatic enemies. It is the new bigotry. If we wish England to remain free, and tolerant, we must avoid both. They will not lead to glory, but to savagery, hate, and confusion!"

"Yes, that is what I meant. It is true."

Peter laid down his paper. "Look here—you've had an overdose of Europe's trouble zones, lately. You want to go home. Why don't you?"

"Read those letters. I feel I haven't really any home. The cottage would be overcrowded. I should have to share a room with Tamara. And I don't very much want to see Marigold married next month to the wrong man."

"Stop harping on that for heaven's sake!"

"Well, why do you let it happen? Peter, you know you love her. You know Jeremy is a fool. You and Tony are a fine couple!"

"Because she'll be a darn sight better off with him than she would be with me, and because I don't want, and can't support a wife like Marigold. Jeremy is all right. One of England's good-bad men. Just as you're one of England's bad-good women, by dear. Bent on making an unholy mess of things, for the sake of a romantic ideal. He'll settle down, when he's married. All this love business is nonsense. It is hard fact, and common sense that count. Thousands a year, against a few hundred! A settled home in England, with horses to ride, and kids in the nursery, against—" he looked round the room. "This! Marigold was too sweet a fool to make a sensible choice, so I had to make it for her." But, he admitted to himself, he would probably go out and get very drunk indeed the night after Marigold was married.

Bitter And Alone

Petronella looked down at him. Her eyes were startled. She had not known she could come so near to disliking and quarreling with Peter. How hard he was, upon this one issue. For a moment, she felt bitter and alone. But the next she realized that he, too, looked miserable. They could not help differing on this subject.

Peter picked up their father's letter.

It commenced, as usual, "My dear Petronella." Peter skimmed through it. They were as comfortable in their cottage as you could be "in a rabbit hutch." He was beginning to get some shape into the garden. Hodgson neglected it. It was not his fault. The new people at the "Forest House" ought to have a boy to help him. There was too much for one man. Stephen Morovitch and Tamara were great talkers, life, art, destiny, and a lot more clap-trap; but Stephen was a nice fellow on the whole.

He occupied himself a good deal taking nature photographs. He had sold several already, to illustrated newspapers. It was cheering the poor chap up, to earn a bit of money. Tamara was very temperamental. It did not do to take any notice of her when she was in one of her moods. She went out a good deal. James had very kindly taken her to several dances. She was no use at all at making a good curry, and much too fond of her wine-flavored "Bortches." But on the whole she was a gay little thing.

Peter laid the letter down. "He's settling into retirement better than I expected. Glad!"

"Except for that craving for curry."

"He can go to town and have it at the club."

Tamara, as far as Peter was able to decipher, thought Ballfield pleasant. "Your father is very fussy about little things, and angry when the bath water is cold. But he takes me out when I am sad, and buys me many pretty things. Your James teases me always, but I do not mind. The being a bridesmaid to beautiful Marigold is wonderful for me, but I am to stay in a very smart hotel for the night, and dance after the wedding with the best man, who already writes me shy love letters. Oh, the rain in this place! But for James I should go mad. All my love,—Tamara."

While she waited for him to finish reading, Petronella stood, smiling faintly, imagining life in the cottage.

"But for James—" said Peter, looking up at her.

"Yes, James!" He hesitated for a moment.

"If you want to get away from all this—settle down; if you can possibly forget Lance, as he wants you to forget him, I think I should go home, old girl. The idea of Tamara and James seems incongruous, but she's very nice."

"You deduced the same as I did, dear. But I think I'm going to leave them to it. We go on together."

NEW WATERFORD

Ladies' Aid society of the Methodist Episcopal church met Thursday afternoon in the church. The society discussed plans for a penny supper to be served Feb. 23 in the church from 5 to 7. Mrs. Herbert Garrod and Mrs. Henry Garrod are in charge. Lunch was served to 23 members. Mrs. Elizabeth Beck will be hostess at the March meeting.

As a courtesy to Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Ward, who recently were married, the Sunday school classes taught by Mrs. S. E. McCune and C. F. Duggan gathered Thursday night at their home for a surprise party and presented them with a shower of gifts.

Mrs. Clayton Simon was hostess recently to the Afternoon Country club with nine members responding to the roll call when "When I Was 16." Mrs. L. L. Justison told of attending Farmers' week in Columbus. The mystery box trophy went to Miss Bessie Brown. A Valentine mail-box was arranged by the hostess. Lunch was served. The annual covered-dish dinner will be held Feb. 22 at the home of Mrs. F. J. Neeld.

Presbyterian Aid society met Thursday night with Mrs. L. T. Williams. Mrs. J. Joseph Taylor led devotionals. Mrs. Elizabeth Beatty, a representative of the Ohio Edison Co., gave a talk on home lighting. Lunch was served with Valentine appointments.

Mrs. Elizabeth Beck has returned to her home from Youngstown where she visited several weeks with her son, Clarence Beck, and family.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Ferguson and Miss Violet Ferguson visited Thursday in Pittsburgh.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Rupert are the parents of a son born Monday in Salem City hospital.

Mrs. Frances Mollenkopf was taken to Salem City hospital Friday for treatment.

C. OF C. OPPOSES ICC CONTROL OF U.S. WATERWAYS

A.K. Bramkamp Cites Threat
To River Transportation
In Lea Measure

Directors of the Chamber of Commerce today left with the transportation committee, headed by Frederick B. Lawrence, further action against the Lea bill, which they heard branded a definite menace to Ohio river shipping.

Allan K. Bramkamp, executive director of the Ohio Valley Improvement association, warned the directors, in session Thursday afternoon in the chamber rooms in the Little building, a tremendous loss to the nation, falling most heavily upon the Ohio valley, will result if Interstate Commerce Commission power over inland waterway transportation is extended as proposed in the Lea bill, now before the house committee on foreign and interstate commerce.

Threats To Industry Seen
The directors present went on record as opposing the measure, after weighing the distinct threat to private industry in the vicinity.

Briefly the threats to transportation by water, as contained in the bill, were seen by Mr. Bramkamp as:

1. A decided limitation of facilities.
2. Boost in rates without a proportionate increase in service.
3. The grant to a federal agency of power to better one transportation line at the expense of another.

Mr. Bramkamp pointed out that regulation of water transport agencies has no relation to a solution of the railroad problem. "If attempted it would destroy the commercial use and value of the waterways which the people of the Ohio valley have made navigable for the use of industry," he explained.

Warns Of Higher Rates
The speaker warned that higher rates and limitation of service would be the inevitable result of regulation.

"The Lea bill," according to Mr. Bramkamp, "presents the erroneous theory which is the basis of the proposal to extend ICC regulation over water carriers. This theory is that the principal way to help the railroads is to drastically raise the level of rates so that not only the marginal but the submarginal roads and those with greatest burdens of debt and fixed charges could make a go of it. In order to accomplish this it would first be necessary to bring all forms of transportation under the power of the commission in order that all rates could be made to go up at the same time."

JEFFERSON GIRL RULES AS DARTMOUTH QUEEN

By The Associated Press.
HANOVER, N. H., Feb. 11.—Gray-eyed Dorothy Gardner of Steubenville, O., Smith college senior, is queen of the 29th annual Dartmouth winter carnival.

The 21-year-old blonde, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Gardner, was crowned snow queen last night, seated on a throne of ice topped by an illuminated "winter sunset." Other candidates for queen comprised her court.

Miss Gardner, who is fond of skating, golf and dramatics, wore a blue ski suit. She was picked for the honor from a group of 22 candidates. The queen is five feet six inches tall and weighs 130 pounds.

SUES BOOKIE AND WINS

Emergency

KANNAPOLIS, N. C.—The long passenger train ground swiftly to a stop.
Passengers looked out in surprise as the train backed a hundred yards to an overpass under which workmen were putting the finishing touches — and stopped again.

They saw a construction worker scramble up the embankment and hand the firemen an object the latter had dropped when he poked his head out to gaze at the project.

It was his false teeth. The train moved on.

High Diver

LOGANSPOUT, Ind.—Unhappy landings have grounded three-year-old Jerry Lee Keller.

His parents decided Jerry would have to sit on the floor in the future after he fell from a chair yesterday and broke his right shoulder blade. It was the third time he had suffered such fracture in falls from the same chair.

Service, No Smile

JEROME, Idaho—New at his job, Deputy Sheriff Dick Seeley arrested a man pilfering gasoline from the sheriff's car.

But Seeley needed information. "Where's the jail?" he asked. His prisoner led him to it.

Painful Lesson

CHICAGO—John Gospodarek, 12, seventh grade pupil at Assumption parochial school, learned about firearms during his geography lesson.

Flustered when his teacher unexpectedly called upon him to recite, John dropped a .38 caliber pistol on the floor. It discharged, sending a bullet into his ankle and terrifying his classmates.

John said he had borrowed the gun from his uncle—while uncle wasn't looking.

RUHR TO GET RHINE POWER
COLOGNE, Germany—Water will be pumped from the Rhine a distance of 10 miles up the Ruhr as part of $25,000,000 scheme in Rheish-Westphalia to supply by electric power and water for industrial purposes under the four-year plan.

Few traces remain now of that once-famous artery of inland commerce which lasted only 27 years, giving way to a new and faster mode of inland commerce—the railroad.

Ninety-eight miles of the 136-mile canal had been finished at a cost of $4,000,000, with only $200,000 required to complete the project. In 1942, when the state legislature refused to appropriate additional money. Later, however, the project was incorporated and finished by private capital.

The first boats traveled from the Ohio river, arriving at Erie Dec. 2, 1844.

JOBLESS AID BUREAU TO BE CLOSED MONDAY

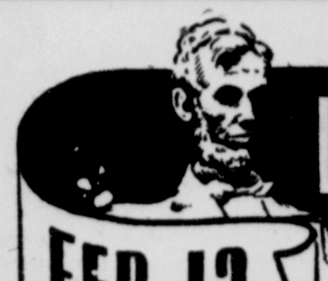

Sharon Quigley, manager of the East Liverpool unemployment compensation office, announced today that the quarters will be closed all day Monday in observance of Lincoln's birthday.

Applicants who ordinarily make their weekly reports on Monday have been requested to report either on Tuesday or Wednesday next week.

There are about 700,000 reindeer in Alaska, divided into 78 herds.

Old Clock Repaired

LOWELL, Mass.—Executive action by Mayor Archambeau was necessary before repairs could be started on the 75-year-old clock in the tower of All Souls church. During its life-time the clock has required only minor repairs.

LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY

HE SHALL NOT PERISH

So long as there is a desire for freedom; so long as there is tolerance and forbearance; so long as there is democracy... so long will the memory of Abraham Lincoln remain fresh.

The inspiration that we receive from the memory of Lincoln has been part and parcel of our business methods. The application of his principles to our business has rewarded us through your ever increasing patronage. We take this opportunity to thank you.

Midland Roms Over Freedom 33-19 In Section 11 Warfare

MIDLAND, Pa., Feb. 11.—With Wayne Hunter leading the way, the Midland High school cagers romped over Freedom 33 to 19 here Friday night.

Exhibiting a strong offensive, the Crucibles bottled Freedom's high-scoring center Butcher, and piled up the impressive total of 10 points to the opposition's six in the first frame. They continued with another 10 in the second to make the intermission score 20 to 10. Midland slowed down in the third to sink only two units to Freedom's five but came back strong in the fourth with 11 markers.

Hunter made nine points for Midland with four goals and a foul. Jimmy Green was runnerup with three fielders and a free throw while Dave Alston placed third with two of each.

Linta led Freedom's offensive with three from the floor and one from the free line. Hamilton followed with one goal and two fouls. Butcher who holds second place in Section 11 W.P.I.A.L. individual scoring with 95 points, found considerable difficulty in penetrating the tight Midland defense. He made only three points before an old football injury forced him out in the third frame.

Midland's subs downed the Freedom seconds 27 to 22 in the curtain-raiser.

Conn Triumph Over Apostoli Pleases Fans

18,900 Turn Out To Witness Fight In New York

By DREW MIDDLETON Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—The battle of the year? You can have the taking of Barcelona. We'll choose the taking of Fred Apostoli in 15 bloody, bitter rounds by William Conn, the fight that had everything. There was cruel and vicious hitting. There was fancy footwork and fancier headwork. There were moments when they stood and let go with all they had as the crowd came roaring to its feet and there were moments when the snarling curses of the fighters rose above the thud of leather on skin.

Finally there was the supreme rest of the boxing gods. Conn, the winner, lay flat on his rubbing table in his dressing room. His eyes were swollen, almost closed. There was a big cut under his right eye, a smaller one under his left. He looked utterly spent. And down the hall Apostoli was stepping into his shower, unmarked and smiling wryly at his manager, Larry White, bellowed, "It's an outrage, we won that fight."

Few in the crowd of 18,958 fans at Madison Square Garden last night thought so, though it had been close all the way. The fans like Conn and they probably will see a lot of him. Mike Jacobs has large plans for the Pittsburgh Irishman and probably will take the first step toward settling the scrambled light-heavyweight situation by throwing him in with Mello Betina, the champion in this state.

Last night he weighed in at 167, seven pounds over the limit for the middleweight division which Apostoli rules here and in California and six pounds above Freddy's weight.

Conn had a flickering left hook that jarred Fred off balance. He had a fast right cross that shook Apostoli and buckled his knees. He had eight rounds on our card with six for Apostoli and one even.

When the 10th round came, Conn, who was tired at the end of the 10-rounder he won from Apostoli in December, still was in there firing with both hands. He was growing stronger, and getting smarter.

O.N.G. Sponsors Meet

CINCINNATI, Feb. 11.—College and high school track men from Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana will compete here next Saturday in a midwinter carnival of athletics sponsored by the 14th infantry, Ohio National Guard.

Salineville High school cagers tonight lost a heart-breaker here Friday night when New Waterford stayed off a last minute Big Purple rally to take the game 28 to 27.

Salineville matched New Waterford's field goals at 13 but lost out at the foul line. It made one of five while the opposition notched two of three.

Both teams made eight points in the first frame. Waterford decided the Salineville fate in the second, however, with seven units to four. Each five tallied seven in the third.

Welsh, New Waterford forward, was the particular nemesis of Salineville. He looped in eight fielders and the two Waterford fouls to top scorers of both contingents.

Varian and DeTerra made the bulk of the remaining Waterford points. Kinney paced Salineville with three goals and the lone Purple foul. Leek and Kelley shared second place with six points each.

Salineville reserves defeated the New Waterford seconds 15 to 14 in the preliminary.

The varsity summary:

Wellsville Trounces Mingo Indians Second Time 56-49

Wellsville High school's cagers again proved themselves the masters of the Mingo Junction Indians when they handed their down-river foes at 56 to 49 shellacking for the second time in two weeks at Wellsville Friday night. In the Bengals' first meeting with Mingo on Jan. 28, they edged the Indians 42 to 40.

Wellsville established an early lead that remained unthreatened throughout the game. It tallied 13 points to Mingo's 10 in the first frame and went to town in the second for 20 to make the intermission score 33 to 16. The Indians returned to outpoint the Bengals in the third, however, with 16 units to 12.

Neither team did well at the foul line. Wellsville sinking only six of 15 and Mingo making five of 14.

Calhoun, Wellsville forward, had the most trouble finding the hoop from the free line, making but one in seven tries. He did much better from the floor, however, to hustle the apple through the twine for eight goals to take top individual scoring honors. His teammate, Jack Call, made three of five from the foul stripe and six from the court for second-place laurels. Healey made the bulk of the remaining Wellsville points with five fielders and two charity tosses.

Welsh did best for Mingo with five goals and one foul. Dunlap and E. Porter were runnerup with four field shots and one free throw apiece.

Mingo's reserves took the preliminary from the Wellsville seconds 38 to 25.

LOCAL SECONDS, FROSH TRIUMPH

McGillivray Leads Attack As Potters Down Salem Subs

East Liverpool High school's reserve contingent paced the Salem seconds through the preliminary to down the little Quakers 30 to 26. In the other preliminary, the freshmen won their return match with Beaver Falls Junior High 24 to 20.

Dick McGillivray led the Potter attack with five field goals and three fouls. He was followed by Bennett and Bucher, who made nine and four points, respectively. Shoe's nine units were best for Salem.

The second-stringers trailed Salem 10 to nine at the end of the first and 15 to 14 at mid-game. They put the game on ice in the third, however, with 10 marks to the opposition's five.

With Treleven and Mort showing the way, the Liverpool frosh retaliated for the setback they received at Beaver Falls earlier in the season.

Both teams made seven points in the first frame, but the locals led 15 to 12 at the half and entered the fourth with a 24 to 16 margin. Treleven and Mort had seven points apiece. Callahan's six led Beaver Falls scorers.

SUSTAINED ATTACK IN FIRST PERIOD DECIDES LOCAL'S 27-20 TRIUMPH

Bruno And Robinson Share Honors In Blue And White Offensive Thrusts—Brown Turns In First-Rate Performance—Dickey Features For Quakers

FLOYD E. WEIDMAN The Review Sports Editor

Coach Howard Lindell's East Liverpool High school passers left little to be desired when they defeated a highly-touted Salem High team 27 to 20 Friday night.

Approximately 700 cheering fans jammed the Potter "pillbox" to see the steadily-improving Blue and White cagers settle Salem's hash in the first quarter when they clicked from every angle to run up a decisive 10-point margin that the Quakers never threatened for the rest of the game.

Although there were times when bad passing marred the locals' performance it was, on the whole, one of their best this season. Neither team seemed able to find the range with any consistency at the foul line, however, the Potters sinking only nine of 21 attempts and the Quakers completing six in 14.

Bruno Looks Best Of Year Lawrence Brown turned in his best performance of the season. His fast dribbling and excellent follow-up tactics netted him six points in the first frame while his exceptionally fine defensive work held his men on the opposition to a single field shot. Lawrence notched a final shot in the third for a total of seven points to tie with Howard Robinson for Potter high-scoring honors.

Robinson, out of the scoring limelight in the last two games, looked like his old self again. He was particularly effective under and near the basket and his fast break and speedy offensive drives set up several scoring plays.

Bernard Brown, while not sharing in the high-scoring honors, did yeoman's service at his regular forward position. In marked contrast to his usual performance, he took comparatively few shots but acted instead as a "feeder." On more than one occasion his excellent tip-off work sent the ball into the free to set up Potter scorers.

Wayne Ward, although far from his usual form, managed to take three-place scoring laurels with six points. Wayne seemed to be the particular peeve of Salem Guard Glenn McLaughlin. The latter fouled Ward no less than three times when the Potter center attempted to loop in baskets. McLaughlin's efforts to bottle his man finally sent him to the showers on personals in the third.

Jim Dickey, a forward, performed best for Salem. He sent the ball through the hoop for three field goals and three fouls to top scorers of both teams. Bill Schaeffer, center, did next best for the Quakers with two dunces and a brace of singletons.

Schaeffer opened the scoring in the first minutes of the game with a foul. Brown countered with a two-master for Liverpool and Schaeffer came back to make another foul. Mackey then notched a charity toss and Bruno followed with another. From here on in it was Robinson and Bruno for most of the first.

After the first frame, however, the locals hot streak cooled and bad ball handling gave the Quakers a chance to draw up within five points of the Potters to make the half-time count 17 to 12.

The locals retaliated in the third, however, to make six units while holding Salem to one. Although the Quakers outpointed the Potters in the fourth, the first-period lead held.

MARKET REVIVES FOR SLIGHT GAIN

Business Optimism Credited For Renewed Activity

By The Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—The stock market got off dead-center today and, with a little more activity than in the preceding sluggish session, posted gains of fractions to a point or so for favorites.

Short covering by traders who wished to be out of the market over the lengthy week-end—the exchange will be closed Monday for Lincoln's birthday commemoration—was given part of the credit for the betterment of the list. Transfers for the two hours approximated 300,000 shares.

A somewhat more optimistic view of business prospects, brokers said, inspired some of the buying in steels, motors, aircrafts and specialties.

That the market still is extremely "thin" was deduced from a run-up of more than 3 points in Westinghouse on a meager turnover. Wide quotations on so-called "quality" issues was a feature of the proceedings.

Prominent stocks on the recovery were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville, J. C. Penney, U. S. Rubber, Douglas Aircraft, Philip Morris and U. S. Gypsum.

Securities at Amsterdam, the only important overseas market open, pointed higher. Bonds were selectively improved and commodities quiet.

Market analysts were encouraged by the Dun & Bradstreet summary estimating building permits issued during January for residential and non-residential construction in 215 cities in the United States advanced against seasonal expectations to $94,720,091, the best figure, with the exception of last January, since 1931.

Those holding railway equipment stocks heard of expanding inquiries for locomotives with prospect for substantial freightcar orders better than for some time.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—Wheat prices were mixed early today, averaging fractionally lower. The Liverpool market was lower than due and reports of weather in the domestic winter wheat belt were generally construed as favorable.
Wheat opened 1/4 down to 1/4 up. May 67 1/2-3/4, July 67 1/2-3/4, and corn started 1/4 higher to 1/4 lower, May 48 1/2-3/4, July 49 3/4-1/2.

Rat-A-Tat-Tat

Dr. Clendenning Goes To Work On Noisy Machine With Ax And Lands In Jail

By The Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 11.—The four hours Dr. Logan Clendenning, health columnist and author, spent in jail yesterday constituted minor punishment compared to what he might have suffered for his ax attack on a noisy air compression machine, workers on the interrupted WPA project said today.

"I got out of range," recalled C. A. French, a workman. "Here that guy was swinging that ax and any minute he might have got blown clear over the hill."

If the valve on the drill had been shattered, he explained, the tremendous air pressure released "would have blown the doctor into a thousand pieces."

Dr. Clendenning smashed at the valve with an ax yesterday afternoon. Explained the author of a one-time best seller, "The Human Body."

"This damned rat-a-tat-tat, day after day, week after week, month after month, year after year," had irritated him beyond restraint.

The noise had been irritating no end, said his neighbors in the fashionable residential section where the machine is being used in sewer construction. The work has been under way four months—seven and a half hours a day, six days a week.

Dr. Clendenning was released on $1,000 bond on charges of disturbing the peace and destroying government property.

LINCOLN

local issues taken a long lead in the speculation over Republican presidential candidates. The field is wide open. From congress, the party might draw men like Senators Taft of Ohio, Vandenberg of Michigan, Lodge of Massachusetts, Representative Barton of New York, or some man not yet mentioned, Saltonstall, Bricker, James, Fitzgerald or some other governor might be put forward.

Outside of this group stands an almost-elected governor who continues to harvest headlines—Thomas E. Dewey of New York. Dewey failed by a whisker to win the New York governorship from the veteran Herbert H. Lehman.

Of the old timers, the chief one in the field is Herbert Hoover. Al M. Landon of Kansas, who ran to a spectacular defeat in 1936, already has said he would not accept the nomination. But Mr. Hoover has made no such statement.

Mr. Hoover will deliver the principal speech at a Lincoln dinner in New York Monday, Dewey and a number of New England governors will be in the audience.

ONE SHOT; 1,000 CROWS

SAN JOSE, Ill.—A blast of dynamite which disturbed the citizens of nearby Delavan and caused wonderment over the countryside killed more than 1,000 crows on a farm west of here, according to Harold Palmer, who set off the charge.

The birds were in a dense hedge north of his home, Palmer said, and several explosive charges had been set among the hedge trees.
